Q: Get certain property from current object (not the origin) I have an array of objects [{ property1: "aaa", property2: "bbb", ... }, { property1: "ccc", property2: "ddd", ... }] I want to know if an object contains a specific key, and then get the current object var findKey = "property1"; var keyFound = isKeyInArray(myObject, findKey); // returns true var currentObject = myObject; console.log(keyFound); // returns true console.log(currentObject); // returns { property1: "aaa", property2: "bbb", ... } var currentObject = myObject[1]; // DOES NOT RETURN THE CURRENT OBJECT. How can I do this? I tried the following but it doesn't work var currentObject = myObject.map(item => { return item[findKey]; }); A: You should use filter() instead of map() and use find() to check if the object exists, and then return the object. For example, you would use something like this: var data = [{ property1: 'aaa', property2: 'bbb' }, { property1: 'ccc', property2: 'ddd' }], findKey = 'property1'; var result = data.filter(item => item[findKey]);
