Q: Plotting two groups of overlapped points on the same axis I would like to plot two sets of points with the same x-axis. One set of points would have y-values between 0 and 10, the other set of points between 0 and -10. I would like to plot these two groups of points on the same axis (in fact the same plot), but one above the other. Here is what I got: `plt.plot(points1[:,0], points1[:,1], '.', color='g', marker='o', ms=10) plt.plot(points2[:,0], points2[:,1], '.', color='r', marker='s', ms=10)` I only want the upper group of points to have negative y values. A: I believe you are looking for `plt.scatter: import matplotlib.pyplot as plt points1 = [[0,0],[1,0],[2,0],[3,0],[4,0],[5,0],[6,0],[7,0],[8,0],[9,0],[10,0],[11,0],[12,0],[13,0],[14,0],[15,0],[16,0],[17,0],[18,0],[19,0],[20,0],[21,0],[22,0],[23,0],[24,0],[25,0],[26,0],[27,0],[28,0],[29,0],[30,0],[31,0],[32,0],[33,0],[34,0],[35,0],[36,0],[37,0],[38,0],[39,0],[40,0],[41,0],[42,0],[43,0],[44,0],[45,0],[46,0],[47,0],[48,0],[49,0],[50,0],[51,0],[52,0],[53,0],[54,0],[55,0],[56,0],[57,0],[58,0],[59,0],[60,`

What's New in the?

File Splitter Lite is a useful utility for splitting large files in multiple parts. With no need to configure settings, users just have to specify the source file and the number of the resulting volumes. Besides, a self-joining executable will be created, in case that is what the user needs. Additional information: Version: File Splitter Lite 1.0.0.0 File type: Split files into a specified number of parts or size File size: about 5.8 MB Languages: English FileMaker: FileMaker Pro, FileMaker Pro 11 and FileMaker Pro 13 Operating systems: OSX, Windows File Splitter LitePresident Trump's decision to pull out of the Paris climate agreement is "an extremely unfortunate move," says former New Jersey Governor Chris Christie, whose administration in January 2016 announced the state's intention to withdraw from the pact. "I think it's going to prove to be a mistake, but it's something that I would predict will be something that I personally will get criticized for," Christie told CNN's "New Day" on Monday. The decision to withdraw from the agreement was made on June 1, the same day Trump gave his "dismal excuse" for not doing so, Christie said. Christie said at the time that Trump's explanation for not withdrawing was "a very thin and unconvincing story," noting that he had said it was "a con game" to save money. "He didn't do it, and he's said that the deal that he made with Obama was the agreement that he would honor, but that wasn't the agreement that Obama had made with the world," Christie said. "I feel bad because it's an agreement I signed on to. I went out and signed an agreement that the state would withdraw from it, and here we are a year later, and it's an extremely unfortunate move," he said. Trump has said repeatedly that he was not comfortable being tied to an international agreement that he says does not apply to the United States, and that he wants to negotiate a new pact. "I'll make my final decision on that over the next few days," Trump told reporters on Monday, while defending his decision not to act on the agreement during the G7 Summit in Italy. He said that he was "100 percent" still open to re-entering into the deal, and would make a decision based on "who the opponent is and what happens in the election." But Christie said Monday that he does not think there will be a new agreement. "I really do not see it," Christie said, adding that he expects that the United States will be "very isolated and very alone" in the world if Trump pulls out of the climate agreement. Christie also said that the idea of Trump waiting until the
